Appendix A-2 — RBI Considerations for the game on October 06, 1912

October 6, 1914 — Detroit vs. Chicago — Detroit scored 4 runs

Fifth Inning — Detroit scored 1 run

Detroit Free Press (DFP) — "Detroit didn't score until the fifth, when Moriarty singled, was advanced to third on a single by Deal, and scored on a sacrifice fly by Lake."

Detroit Journal (DJ), Detroit News (DN), Detroit Times (DT), Chicago Tribune (CHT), and Chicago Examiner (CHEX) — Nothing at all.

Thus, we know for certain that George Moriarty scored the fifth-inning run on a 1-RBI sacrifice fly by Lake.

Sixth Inning — Detroit scored 1 run

DFP — "The Tigers' second run came in the sixth. With one out, Corriden drew a pass, took second on an infield out, and scored on Louden's base blow to left."

DJ, DN, DT, CHT, and CHEX — Nothing at all.

Thus, we know for certain that Red Corriden scored the sixth-inning run on a 1-RBI single by Louden.

Seventh Inning — Detroit scored 2 runs

DFP — "Deal's double, Kocher's single, and a sacrifice fly that [right fielder] Collins returned poorly enabled the Detroit crew to lug across a pair of runs in the seventh."

DJ, DN, DT, CHT, and CHEX — Nothing at all.

From the official Day-By-Day (DBD) records (and the newspaper box scores) we know that Detroit's four runs in the game were scored by Moriarty, Corriden, Charlie Deal, and Brad Kocher. And, since we know that Moriarty scored the fifth-inning run and that Corriden scored the sixth-inning run, we can deduce with 100% confidence that the two seventh-inning runs were scored by Deal and Kocher. Now, while the DFP description for the two seventh-inning runs states that a "sacrifice fly" was involved, the official DBD records show only one sacrifice fly by the Tigers — credited to Lake. And, since the DFP account states specifically that Lake hit his sacrifice fly in the fifth inning, officially there was no sacrifice fly in the seventh inning. Significantly, the official plate appearances for each of the Tigers players are entirely consistent with there being no sacrifice fly by the Tigers, other than the one hit by Lake. Here is the box score and the pertinent information:

Player	AB	R	H	W
Jones	5	0	2	0
Vitt	5	0	1	0
Corriden	3	1	2	1
Veach	4	0	1	0
Louden	4	1	1	0
Moriarty	4	1	1	0
Deal	4	1	2	0
Kocher	4	1	1	0
Wheatley	1	0	0	0

The bottom portion of the box score states that Jones, Corriden, and Deal had doubles and that Lake had a sacrifice fly. Also, Chicago pulled one double play — Collins (rf) to Schalk (c) to Zeider (3b) to Rath (2b) — and had three fielding errors — Borton (1b), Schalk (c), Kuhn (c).

It can also be advanced that the official DBD records (and the unofficial newspaper box scores) are erroneous — that the seventh-inning sacrifice fly, perhaps by Lake or Jones, was mistakenly omitted. However, such a position also requires that there be an accompanying change in the number of at bats had by Lake (1 instead of 2) or Jones (4 instead of 5). My position is to leave the official records as they are unless there is compelling evidence in support of changing them.

As can be seen, each batting slot in the lineup had at least four plate appearances. The first two slots (occupied by Jones and Vitt) each had five plate appearances. Thus, Vitt was the final batter of the game. Moreover, from the official records for the Chicago pitchers, we know that Frank Lange hurled the final two innings (i.e., the eighth and ninth innings), facing 9 men, yielding 2 hits, without walking or hitting any batters. Therefore, the first batter he faced was Corriden. Since Lange faced 9 batters and two of them got hits, six of the other seven batters were retired and the other batter was safe on either a fielder's choice or on a fielder's error.

The official records also show that Joe Benz pitched the sixth and seventh innings, facing 10 men, yielding three hits and issuing one base on balls. Thus, the first batter that Benz faced was Vitt. And, Vitt was also the last batter that Benz faced. From the DFP descriptions of the sixth and seventh innings we know that Benz surrendered hits to Moriarty, Deal, and Kocher and that he walked Corriden. Thus, the other six batters Benz faced — Vitt, Veach, Moriarty, Lake, Jones, and Vitt again — were retired.

The starting pitcher, Harry Smith, must have faced 19 batters (although the official records state 18), giving up six hits and no walks; two of the hits were by Moriarty and Deal in the fifth inning. Smith also struck out two batters — Vitt and Veach.

Let's now put together a scorecard that incorporates all of the information that we have:

Player	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9
Jones	S		out		out		FO + E-2		D
Vitt	K		X	S	X	out	out		out
Corriden	9-2-5-4XS			out		*W	X	D	X
Veach	FO-9			K		GO		out
Louden	X	out		out		S[1]		out
Moriarty		out		X	*S	out		SOE
Deal		out			S	X	*D	out
Kocher		X	out		out		*S	X	out
Weatherley			out
Lake					SF[1]		out		out

While this scorecard is consistent with the information given in the official record, it is not meant to express exactly what happened. Thus, here is what is shown for the first inning — Jones singed; Vitt struck out. Corriden singled, sending Jones to third. Veach flied out to right; after the catch Jones started for home and Collins threw the ball to Schalk, which caused Jones to retreat to third; Schalk threw to Zeider, but Jones was safe; meanwhile, Corriden tried to advance to second, but was caught on a throw to Rath, completing a double play.

With regard to the two seventh-inning runs, there are several possible scenarios that are consistent with the information. For example, here are a couple not far-fetched possibilities:

[A] Deal doubled and scored on a 1-RBI single by Kocher. Kocher advanced to second on an out by Lake and scored on a flyout to right by Jones coupled with a fielding error charged to the catcher following Collins' poor return of the ball. Vitt was retired to end the inning.

[B] Deal doubled, moved to third on a single by Kocher, and scored on a 1-RBI groundout by Lake, Kocher advancing to second. Kocher then scored on a flyout to right by Jones coupled with a fielding error charged to the catcher following Collins' poor return of the ball. Vitt was retired to end the inning.

[C] Deal doubled moved to third on a single by Kocher. Deal then scored on a flyout to right by Lake coupled with a fielding error charged to the catcher following Collins' poor return of the ball; Kocher took third on the play. Kocher then scored on a 1-RBI groundout by Jones. Vitt was retired to end the inning.

What comes out from these scenarios are these 0-or-1 RBI possibilities for Kocher, Lake, and Jones. Because of the uncertainty of who batted in whom in the seventh inning, Retrosheet has chosen to leave the RBI cells for Kocher, Lake, and Jones blank in their box score (and the derived player daily file).
