John Donnelly Found

Our Find of the Month is a player most of you didn't even know existed. John Donnelly played with Washington in 1873 and Philadelphia in 1874 and his record had been merged in with Peter Donnelly. These were actually two different players. Here is Peter Morris's write-up on how this was discovered.

A player with the surname of Donnelly played in the NA in 1871 (Fort Wayne), 1873 (Washington), and 1874 (Philadelphia Whites). At one point this was believed to belong to two different Philadelphia players, Peter and John Donnelly. Then at some point, it came to be assumed that these two men were brothers, though I am aware of no evidence that they were. Then these two were combined into a single player, helpfully known as Peter J. Donnelly. Then somebody found an obit for a ballplayer named Peter Donnelly who died in Jersey City in 1890 and figured it was the ballplayer and stuck that death date in the encyclopedias.

A few years ago, John Zinn and I both thoroughly researched that Peter Donnelly and found that, while he played for the amateur Champion Club of Jersey City in the late 1860s, he never left Jersey City, had no connection to Philadelphia, and thus clearly did not play in the National Association. Along the way, both John Thorn and Richard Malatzky pitched in to help sort things out. Recently, Richard Hershberger generously offered to copy a large number of newspaper scans he had made, including a number of Philadelphia papers from the early 1870s, giving me the perfect opportunity to revisit the Donnelly mystery. There were several other Donnellys playing in Philadelphia, including a J. and F. Donnelly who played for an amateur club called the Hartnells, but these were definitely not our men, so for clarity's sake I have excluded them. Here is what I found:

Philadelphia Sunday Mercury, August 8, 1869, Experts: Donnelly, cf
Philadelphia Sunday Mercury, September 12, 1869, Experts: Donnelly, lf

Philadelphia Sunday Mercury, February 19, 1871, statistics of Experts for 1870 season: P. Donnelly played in 15 games, McGee 14 (most was McKenna with 30). John Donnelly is listed as also having taken part in a few (unspecified) number of games.
Philadelphia Sunday Mercury, March 19, 1871, P. Donnelly plays for the Experts against a picked nine that includes J. Donnelly Philadelphia Sunday Mercury, April 2, 1871, Donnelly of the Experts has been signed by Mayer to play for the Kekiongas. He can play the infield or outfield but it expected to play second base.
Philadelphia Sunday Mercury, April 2, 1871, John Donnelly of this city may join the General Wayne Club of Paoli
Fort Wayne Weekly Sentinel, April 5, 1871: "Peter Donnelly, formerly of the 'Experts' of Philadelphia, arrived in the city yesterday evening. He is engaged by the Kekiongas."
Philadelphia Sunday Mercury, May 7, 1871, P. Donnelly of the Experts is playing for the Kekiongas
Philadelphia City Item, July 19, 1871, new professional Damon nine: J. Donnelly, lf
Philadelphia Sunday Dispatch, July 23, 1871, "Edward Mincher and P.A. Donnelly have been expelled from the Kekionga Club for 'revolving.'"
Philadelphia Sunday Mercury, July 23, 1871, Donnelly has left the Kekiongas
Brooklyn Eagle, July 24, 1871, Fort Wayne expels Edward Mincher and P.A. Donnelly

Philadelphia Sunday Mercury, February 20, 1876, "the two Donnellys" are getting in shape to play ball
Philadelphia Sunday Mercury, February 27, 1876, list of possibilities for the Athletic reserve nine: John Donnelly, Peter Donnelly, etc.
Philadelphia Sunday Mercury, March 12, 1876, another list of possibilities for the Athletic reserve nine includes John Donnelly but not Peter Donnelly
Philadelphia Sunday Mercury, March 26, 1876, the Athletic reserve nine includes Donnelly, ss
Philadelphia City Item, April 26, 1876, new nine formed that will include Donnelly of the Athletic Reserves
Philadelphia City Item, July 27, 1876, Donnelly of Athletic Reserves with Mountain City Club
Philadelphia City Item, August 6, 1876, Campbells: Donnelly, 3b

After that, I found no mention of either man. Coverage dropped off considerably when Philadelphia was booted out of the league, but even so, the lack of mention means that their playing days may have ended.

Based on this, I conclude: (1) Peter Donnelly was the 1871 player; (2) John Donnelly was the 1873 player; (3) The 1874 player was almost certainly John; (4) The combination of Peter and John Donnelly into P.J./Peter J. Donnelly was a mistake; (5) There is no evidence to suggest that Peter and John were brothers, and indeed on occasions when it would have been easy to refer to them as such, they were instead referred to in ways that suggest otherwise (e.g., "the two Donnellys").
Of the many notes included above, three helped to identify John Donnelly:

Philadelphia Sunday Dispatch, December 31, 1871, profile of Marions: John Donnelly, excellent young player, 21 years old, 5’6”, 132 lb., has played for West Philadelphia, Keystone, etc.

Philadelphia Sunday Dispatch, January 28, 1872, John Donnelly has opened a segar store and base ball headquarters at 1015 S. Ninth

Philadelphia Sunday Mercury, July 6, 1873, John L. Donnelly, shortstop of the Washingtons, was married on Monday evening [June 30] to a young lady of this city

So we are looking for a John L. Donnelly who was born in 1850, grew up in Philadelphia, was married there on June 30, 1873, and may have lived at 1015 S. Ninth. A check of the city directory found both a John G. and a John L. Donnelly at that address in the early 1870s, and more digging established that John G. was the father and John L. the son. Both men had disappeared from the Philadelphia CD by 1877, and on the 1880 census they turned up together in Donnelly, Minnesota, the community founded by Ignatius Donnelly, the well-known politician and author. John L. was married by this time and subsequent censuses show his wedding having taken place in 1873, matching another of our clues. John L. Donnelly eventually moved to the Twin Cities and died in 1913, with an obituary noting that he was the nephew of Ignatius Donnelly. (While Ignatius Donnelly's books about Atlantis and the true authorship of Shakespeare aren't taken seriously these days, they did have a big influence at the time and helped to shape the thinking of Helena Blavatsky, the founder of Theosophy [c.f., Doubleday, Abner; Spalding, A.G.]. The Minnesota community that Ignatius Donnelly founded was also the site of a game of baseball reported in Porter's Spirit of the Times in 1857.) The only real "controversy" seems to be whether his death occurred on the 23rd or 24th; newspapers accounts are quite specific that he dropped dead shortly before midnight on the 23rd, but the DC gives his death as the 24th, perhaps on the basis that a person isn't considered dead until a doctor arrives and says they are dead. I wouldn't argue with either listing.

John Louis Donnelly (5'6", 132 lb.)
b. November 15, 1850 Philadelphia
d. December 24, 1913 Minneapolis
buried Saint Theresia Cemetery, Donnelly, Minnesota

Zachary Taylor

With the wife of regular first baseman Charlie Gould experiencing complications after giving birth to twins, a player named Taylor made his major league debut for Baltimore's National Association entry on September 10, 1874. According to the next day's Baltimore American, "neither Gould or [sic] Snyder put in an appearance yesterday, and the Baltimores were compelled to avail themselves of the services of two amateur players, Taylor from the Peabodys, and Johns, from the Atlantics." Gould remained by his wife's bedside and Taylor took his place for the season's final thirteen games, drawing praise for his fine defensive performance from the local papers, which made it clear that he was no novice at that position. Indeed, they referred to him with a familiarity suggesting that the new first baseman did not need an introduction, so they did not give him one. Aside from the initial mention that he was a Peabodys player, no other clue to his identity has been found.

Accordingly, when the first baseball encyclopedias were compiled, this player was listed simply as Taylor, without a first name or initial. In the November 1995 issue of this newsletter, his name was changed to Z. H. Taylor and one month later it was updated to Zachary H. Taylor. The sources for those updates were not given, but there can be little doubt that they were correct, for as we have learned more about the Peabody Club, it has become clear that Zachary H. Taylor was that team's mainstay for a full decade while others came and went.

As early as 1867, a player named Taylor hit a clutch home run for the Peabodys in a game billed as being for the local junior championship. This player saw action at a variety of positions in those early years, but by the 1870s, it had become rare to find a box score for the Peabodys without Taylor listed at first base. There was never more than one Taylor in those box scores, so no initial was ever given, but several articles about the Peabodys filled in the gap. On May 7, 1870, the New York Clipper provided the roster for that year's Peabody nine, listing "Zack. Taylor" as one of the starters and "Z. H. Taylor" as the team's captain. On April 3, 1875, an ad for an upcoming "grand hop" sponsored by the Peabody Club listed Z. H. Taylor as one of the organizers. Another roster in the New York Clipper of April 1, 1876, listed the Peabody first baseman as "Z. H. Taylor late of the Baltimore Club." With the Baltimore papers having referred to the 1874 player in ways that suggested he was well known in the area and an experienced first baseman, this was clearly our man.

But who was Z. H. "Zack" Taylor? The only man who seemed to fit was Zachary Hamner Taylor, who was born in Baltimore in 1850 and was the son of a local butter manufacturer named Robert Taylor. Definitive proof, however, was lacking until Richard Hershberger sent me an article from the Baltimore American, June 3, 1873, that listed the official representatives of Baltimore's various amateur clubs. The representative of the Peabody Club was Z. H. Taylor of 46 Camden. That was the 1873 Baltimore CD's address of our candidate's father, Robert Taylor, while Zachary and his brother James (who saw fire and who saw rain) were living at 62 Camden.

Zachary Hamner Taylor (believed to be the only major league player named for a Whig president)
B. February 21, 1850 Baltimore
D. November 21, 1917 Baltimore

William Gallagher

William Gallagher played for Baltimore in 1883 and Philadelphia in 1885. A note in Sporting Life said he came from the Archer club of Philadelphia where one of his teammates was Charles Gallagher. Richard Malatzky identified a possible candidate in Philadelphia who lived at 2136 Cuthbert in Philadelphia and died in 1899. Peter Morris found an article in a Philadelphia paper about the Archer club that identified all of its players. There was William Gallagher and Charles Gallagher and the article said to address all correspondence to C. A. Gallagher, manager, 2136 Cuthbert. Obviously, this is the player we have been seeking.

Lou Paul

Our Mystery of the Month is Lou Paul, not to be confused with RuPaul. He caught 3 games for Philadelphia in 1876, but there is no proof that his first name was Louis. There was a Louis Paul who lived in Philadelphia at the time and was a butcher but nothing points to him being the ballplayer. So who was the mysterious Mr. Paul? Peter Morris found someone who could be our guy if we could find a way to prove it. Peter writes:

I don't think we will ever find the 1876 player whose surname was Paul. After all, all that the game accounts tell us is that he was "very young and rather too light in weight." We don't know what club he came from, and he could easily have been given a trial despite lacking the credentials. However, here is a candidate who fits everything we know:

Philadelphia City Item, June 16, 1872, promising young Mackinaws: send challenges to H. Paul, 1130 Wistar Street
Philadelphia City Item, November 14, 1872, Young Bachelors: Henry H. Paul

Philadelphia Sunday Mercury, September 5, 1875, Moore club of this city: Paul, catcher

The address points us to Harry Horter Paul (1855? - 1908), a banker. He even gets married in the spring of 1877, exactly when his career (such as it was) comes to an end. That said, however, this is a very, very weak circumstantial case, and given the complete lack of notes, there is no reason to expect that it will improve.

Committee Thoughts

At the convention in Miami, it was pointed out to me that I am now the longest serving committee chairman in SABR, having been chairman of this committee for 28 years. That got me thinking that at some point I will need to turn this committee over to someone else. It would be nice to have someone younger that would be interested in taking over the committee when I step down. I am not planning on doing this anytime soon, but I don't think I want to be Connie Mack either. If anyone thinks they might have any interest in this, please let me know.
